

Irma and District Shocked by Fatal Shooting Accident

On Sunday afternoon, while returning home on horseback, William Neil Prior met with a fatal accident. In some unaccountable way a rifle which he was carrying was discharged, the bullet entering the back of his head. The horse continued on his way towards home, and was met by Mr. J. Meyer, who returned with the horse and found the body lying in the road. He immediately notified the parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Prior, of the Orbindale district.

Born July 31, 1913, the deceased was just past his 23rd birthday. He was the third son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Prior, who are old timers of the Orbindale district, settling on their homestead in 1907. "Bill" as he was known by everyone, was a popular athlete, taking a leading part in all the sports of the district, and will be greatly missed by young men and women. He leaves to mourn his loss, his parents, three brothers, Earl, Ted and Babe, also two sisters, Mrs. Dave Veitch in Vancouver and Mrs. Earl Grey.

Funeral services were held from Irma United church on Tuesday afternoon, September 8th. One of the largest congregations in the history of Irma turned out to pay their last respects to the deceased. The services were in charge of the pastor, Rev. E. F. Kemp, who delivered a very appropriate and impressive message. The hymns "Nearer my God to Thee," "Abide With Me" and "Now the Day is Over" were led by the choir. A solo, "Hark, Hark, My Soul," was beautifully rendered by Mrs. Pryce Jones.

Interment was made in the Irma cemetery, the following acting as pall bearers: Messrs. G. Coulman, Geo. Wilson, Ralph Lukens, Don Mullens, Donald Gunn, Erling D. Moller.

The numerous and beautiful floral tributes were received from the following: Mother, Dad, Sisters, and Brothers; The Coulman Family; Mr. and Mrs. Pheasney and family; Mr. and Mrs. Collin McLean, Betty and Marry; Joan and Cliff Saville; Mr. and Mrs. Haun and family; Mr. and Mrs. Cap. Bridge Worker Killed
In 30-Foot Fall Thursday

Wainwright, Sept. 4.—As he was running to reach a safety zone, Arthur Jaster, 32, bridge and building worker for the C.N.R., was knocked off the railway bridge over the Battle river, Thursday, fell 30 feet to a concrete abutment and died in hospital here seven hours later.

Jaster had been working on the crew for two months and the employment card showed his nearest relative to be William Jaster of Tilger, Sask. He is believed to have a sister at Banff.

DRASTIC LEGISLATION EXPECTED TO HELP CITIZENS OUT OF THE HOLE

Edmonton, Alta., Sept. 7. — The special session of the Alberta legislature was prorogued Tuesday night and it is now possible to take a more comprehensive view of what it accomplished in the way of legislation. To a certain degree it has silenced the critics of the Social Credit regime who have been complaining that "nothing has been accomplished by the Aberhart government."

This criticism was always a bit unfair, but there was not much to show for its record before the government now has at its name. Whatever the judgment may be as to the value or usefulness of the legislation passed, there can now be no saying "nothing has been done."

Outstanding among the 20 bills introduced in the session are the three acts that have been described as the most radical ever placed on the statute books in any province in the dominion since confederation. These are:

1. The Act to provide credit for the people of Alberta;
2. The Act for the reduction and settlement of debts; and
3. The Act affecting municipalities' securities interest.

The act to provide credit for the people of Alberta is regarded almost as the Magna Charta of Social Credit in Alberta. It establishes the machinery for payment of the promised basic dividends to those who co-operate with the government in its plans. It provides for the establishment of the Alberta Credit House, through which the credit will be paid. Contrary to expectation this act does not become law until proclaimed by the orders-in-Council.

It has awakened wide-spread interest as embodying the main portion of the Social Credit plan according to Premier William Aberhart, for Alberta. It defines the qualifications for receipt of dividends, the penalties for breach of contract for co-operation, and the forms of registration to be used in connection with the registering of citizens. It also legalizes the registration that has already been made. None of its provisions state that only Social Crediters can get dividends, but it does stipulate that those receiving the benefits of co-operation must co-operate.

The most radical legislation, however, is that dealing with debt adjustment in the province. In some respects the act for the reduction and settlement of certain debts is similar to the act passed by the Ontario government under Premier Hepburn, which made it possible to cancel the contracts of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission.

It extends its provisions for reduction of the principal of debts from 1932 onward, and reduces the debts of private persons to the extent of the interest and principal paid since July 1 that year. Contrary to the views of some of its critics it does not interfere with interest rates. Interest rates are within the jurisdiction of the federal government, but the principal is within the power of the province to deal with.

The only way in which the act affects interest is by preventing the use of the courts of the province to collect more than five per cent on all debts. The courts under the control of the provincial government can be ordered by provincial statute to refuse to order payment of more than a certain amount. That is how the new law overcomes the problem of cutting interest payments without touching interest rates.

There were two other acts passed affecting debts and both of them of importance. One embodied amendments to the present debt adjustment act. It extends the provisions five years to July 1937, and makes it impossible to appeal from decisions the debt adjustment board. It also gives the government through orders-in-council the power to declare a ten-year moratorium. This act became law and operative with the assent of the Lieutenant-Governor at prorogation.

The other debt act is that dealing with Municipalities Securities interest. It prevents municipalities from paying more than three per cent interest on their securities.

All of these acts were fought by the opposition, though not with the concentrated energy of former days. There was a general realization that some sort of reduction in debts and interest payments was overdue and that the party or politician who opposed such a set of laws would find itself and himself opposed to the wishes of a large majority of the electors. There are rumors that the legislation will be challenged on the grounds of constitutionality and that the federal government may be asked to allow it. But word from Ottawa indicates there is very little likelihood of the latter being done as there has been nothing of the sort done for many years. The Ottawa government is reported as being loath to take such action, especially where a provincial government received such a clear mandate to enact such laws as the Aberhart government did.

Lou Ambers is the new lightweight boxing champ. He took the crown away from Tony Canzoneri last Friday in a bout in New York. Lou was a former pupil of Tony and Tony must have shown Lou a little too much. The first thing Lou did the next day was to go shopping in New York for the best saxophone he could get. Just what a pug will do with a saxophone isn't known but the public can take a lot of punishment too it seems.

The U. S. golfers defeated their British rivals for the Walker cup emblematic of team golf supremacy. The Yanks have held this cup since 1922 against all comers.

Hockey talk is already in the air and the big leagues are beginning to trade players in order to bolster up their teams. Howie Morenz, a veteran of 13 years in the National hockey league, is going back to his first love, the Montreal Canadiens, where he became famous. He has had a couple of years with the Chicago Black Hawks and the New York Rangers. The Canadiens feel that Morenz will put their team back in the running for national honors. Four Edmonton stars are reported to get a trial with the team.

The Calgary Mustangs are champions of the Alberta Northern Baseball League by defeating the Edmonton Cardinals in the playoffs. The players in the league have scattered to their homes in California and other southern climes to wait for sunny weather here again next season. A revival.

A new world's professional record for five miles was set by Frank Pritchard, of Buffalo, New York, at the Canadian National exhibition 5-mile swim marathon by making the distance in 2 hours, seven minutes and nine seconds. The old mark of 2:08:55 was set last year by Gianni Gambi of Italy. Swimming in the still waters of Lake Ontario for over two hours is a feat in itself. Swimming five miles in two hours is a pretty fast pace at that, about as fast as a slow walk.

The Edmonton Grads, world's champion ladies basketball aggregation, came back from their European invasion last Friday and received the plaudits of their fellow citizens. They took in the Olympic games but didn't have a chance to play as ladies basketball wasn't on the list. At that, I'll bet a four stamp certificate that they could trim some of the men's teams over there.

J. L. Dodds dropped into the sports editor's sanctum last week after his sojourn at the coast. Incidentally he handed us a copy of the News-Herald published in Vancouver with an account of the boxing match James J. Walsh, of Innisfree and other points north, had with Maxie Baer. Friend Dodds said he saw the fiasco and it was too funny for words. James looked like a scared rabbit when he saw the Baer who he went over the mountains to see. The sports scribe of the News-Herald was not any too kind in his remarks about Innisfree's white hope, calling him a "tumbling tub of lard transported from the peaceful farm lands of Innisfree." Further on he says "When weird scenes are staged in boxing rings, James J. Walsh will be one of the principals. Walsh nervously fidgeted as he gazed at Baer at the start of the brief episode. He nervously twitched and his eyes rolled like those of a whipped hound. The bell rang and he rushed out and wrapped his arms around the Baer middle, clinging heartily to the sanctuary he found there. Maxie, puzzled, looked down his nose, brushed aside the clinging battler a few times and then tapped him on the head. Walsh knelt on the canvas, heard the count and hurried away."

Evidently James was like the man from North Dakota who covered too much territory. He can at least say he was in the same ring with Maxie Baer.

Famous last words—Thirty days.

The fall meeting of the Sunday school executive was held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. I. S. Reeds on Friday evening, September 4th, and was well attended by officers and teachers. Devotional exercises were conducted by Mr. Reeds, S.S. Supt., and a business session followed, Miss Alice Flewelling performing her regular duties as Secretary.

Additions and changes to the teaching staff were made, as follows: Miss Ethel Tate, assistant teacher for beginners; Mr. A. E. Peterson, assistant teacher for Bible class; Mrs. Arnold, teacher of primary class, vice Mrs. Higginson resigned; Mr. T. Askin, teacher of junior boys; Mrs. Shaw, teacher of senior girls, vice Mrs. S. Johnson resigned; Mrs. Caprin Winkler, pianist, Miss Mary Jones assistant.

On motion it was decided that temperance instruction should be given by the teachers during class period.

Mrs. Locke and Mrs. Reeds were appointed a committee to secure leaders for the C.G.I.T., and Mr. Locke and Mr. Kemp were given a like responsibility in regard to the boys' groups.

It was decided to celebrate Rally Day on Sunday, September 20th, with Mrs. Shaw as speaker, and the junior choir to lead the singing.

A pleasant social time followed after business was concluded, when a delicious luncheon was served. Mrs. Reeds was hostess, assisted by Mrs. Shaw, Miss A. Knudson and Miss A. Flewelling.

Word has just been received from Alvin Cooper, of Calgary, Boys' work secretary, that he expects to make a tour of this part of the province towards the latter part of this month. He offers to conduct a track meet for our local groups if desired, or is willing to fit in with any other plans made in connection with his visit. Dates are not yet decided and a further announcement will be made in due course.

GRAIN TRADE AND MINIMUM PRICE

The Western Producer in its issue of September 3rd, referring to the decision of the government in regard to the minimum price for wheat and its reception by Western farmers, says:

"To them and to many of those whom they elected it must have come as a cruel disillusionment to find that their government chose to listen to and be guided by the grain trade and other reactionary elements in their midst while refusing even to acknowledge the submissions of organized agriculture."

The implication that the grain trade or any section of it has at any time made representations to the Government, or to the Canadian Wheat Board, or has tendered advice to those bodies, relative to the establishment of the minimum price for wheat at 87½ cents per bushel or any other figure, is absolutely false.

The interests of wheat producers and of the grain trade are identical in regard to grain prices. The prosperity of the grain trade in Canada is bound up with the prosperity of the producers. It has no interest in keeping prices down. The figure at which the minimum price should be set is a matter to be decided by the Government having in view the loss which it might be prepared to sustain in the event of a decline in world wheat values. The grain trade has repeatedly stated its belief that producers must be assisted to overcome the adverse conditions resulting from drought and excessively low prices. But it has been opposed to attempts to fix the price at which Canadian grain should be offered in the export markets or to hold Canadian wheat at prices above its relative value in world markets because such attempts must result in (a) loss of markets and diminution of sales, (b) the creation of burdensome surpluses, (c) eventual loss both to producers and taxpayers, and (d) encouragement of uneconomic and high-cost production by our competitors.

In the continuance of the open market for grain and the preservation of every available channel through which Canadian grain can be sold are to be found a guarantee of the best returns to Canadian producers. To maintain such returns is as much the desire and interest of the grain trade as of the producers themselves.

There is room for honest difference of opinion as to what the minimum price should be. But there is no justification for false imputations of motive and act.

Thou Shalt Not Love

— A NOVEL BY —
GEORGIA GRAIG

Starr thought she had never seen anything quite so comfortable as the mad-sort of place with its crimson leather chairs, bookcases with dim lights over them and low, comfortable chairs, each with its own particular light. There were scatter rugs, dim-hued and velvety and the gleam of copper or brass here and there, and she held her breath as it took her straight back home—a painting on one wall of Egyptian gods and goddesses who stood in their stiff-posed stances of dress, with geometrical hands and draped bodies making the same old mysterious signs at each other, signalling.

The man caught Starr's eyes, saw something in them he did not understand, nor did he care.

"Just a few of your pals," he said. "Thought you might like them. You might catch up a bit of chatter with them while I tell you what we'd like to eat."

Over the supper they talked, undisturbed. But it was a talk of consequences that it was a table of scarcely touched food as their eyes held each other's in long moment of appraisal.

The man's elbows rested on the table and he leaned close. The girl's slim fingers twisted nervously in her lap as her glance flashed to where she had dropped her coat on a red leather chair. A faint color crept beneath the pallor of her cheeks, feeling him look at her the way he was looking.

It was then, after they had fenced to the point of one or the other lunging for a body blow, that he made the most astounding proposition a man ever made to a girl.

He explained in his clipped voice: "There hasn't appeared any particular need for mentioning it before, but my name is Michael Fairbourne. The next in the biography confession is that I work for the Tarrance Publishing Company. One of our recent novels is 'Play-Girl.' Heard of it?"

Starr nodded. "Heard of it? You hadn't? 'Play-Girl' was on everybody's lips. One of those sensational best-sellers which come once in a blue moon. Some of them come every few years, of course; others are in the 'Three Weeks' class and make a devastating disturbance of their own. But it was the consensus of opinion that 'Three Weeks' was a Victorian and skimpy sort of tome, one which ought to be on every Sunday-School library shelf compared with 'Play-Girl.' 'Play-Girl'—a daring, risque story of an ultra-modern woman's love—and sin. Her own unregenerate, unrepentant life-story—of a life still too young really to be called a life, but—"

Michael Fairbourne said curtly: "I wrote it."

Starr caught her breath incredulously. "You! You wrote it? But I thought—"

"So does everybody else," he said grimly. His face was as flushed as her own, and he appeared to be uncertain just how he wanted to continue. But he plunged on headlong. "The company I work for ballyhooed it as the confession story of a woman who had sinned, a true story written by the anonymous 'Play-Girl' herself. He shrugged his big shoulders and waited the space of time it took him to light a cigarette. "That's baloney, of course. I wrote the thing on an impulse, and it got away from me. Have you ever known the feeling of starting a small thing rolling, much as you've

RHEUMATISM SPREAD TO ALL HER JOINTS

Obtained Relief by Using Kruschen Salts

Here is a sad story of suffering, but it has a happy ending. This woman was attacked by severe rheumatism which spread to all her joints. But the Kruschen brought relief as she describes below—

"I feel that it is time to tell you how Kruschen Salts brought me relief from a severe attack of rheumatism. I had rheumatism in my legs and knees, later spreading to every joint in my body. This lasted over a period of 15 weeks. I was then ordered to bed with acute rheumatism. I was recommended to try Kruschen and before finishing the second bottle I was able to perform my normal duties—(Mrs. L.D.)

probably made a snowball when you were a kid, and then finding that he was growing wildly beyond your control? Well, that's what happened to 'Play-Girl.' The last thing I ever dreamed of in the world was that it would cause such a sensation. Now the public is clamoring for the author to be revealed—a sort of 'personal appearance' command, as it were, and my publisher demands that I either simmer forward and 'confess myself the damn fool author of the damn fool book, or else produce an author who would be more in keeping."

Starr interrupted, not understanding what he was driving at. Her acquaintance with publishers had been with those who had published her father's tomes on archeology. It had not occurred that any person could go to the tremendous trouble of putting down on paper enough words to fill a whole book and then shrink from the acclaim of authorship.

"Well," she asked wonderingly, "why don't you admit your identity and take the fame that's coming to you? I should think it would be marvelous to be a real author."

"Who? Me?" Michael snapped, and he gave a short laugh. "Fame? Notoriety? The word! And certainly no credit to the kind of masculine brain that could evolve such truck. No I can't do it."

"Why did you write it then?" Starr wondered, but he was paying her no attention.

"I might as well make a clean breast of the whole thing while I'm about it," he said, as his jaw clamped firmly. "Truth is there's a girl I hope to marry. Stephanie Dale. The Dales are one of the oldest, proudest families in New York, which might not be saying a great deal, at that, except that they're among the few real old New Yorkers who still talk a great deal about dear old Uncle Great-grand-son Peter Stuyvesant and make their family prayers to a wooden leg. That old hokey means a lot of them yet, and if they ever found out that I was the author of the scandalous 'Play-Girl,' it would be all off between me and Stephanie."

Starr said, "Oh! very softly. Those few words of 'his' spoke volumes about the life of Michael Fairbourne. Not for nothing had she been born in the shadow of Old South Church and been reared in the rarified atmosphere that spreads over Beacon Hill. Though not for worlds would she ever have had Michael Fairbourne guess that—not now. But somehow she hated to think of him in the role of social climber. To any extent, it just didn't seem to fit.

The hard young face so near to hers was very intent. Apparently the scheme of things he had mapped out for himself meant a great deal to Starr's Broadway "Hassan." Suddenly he was talking to her as intimately as though he had known her a lifetime. Much as it was a relief to express in words the thoughts he had been forced to keep to himself. He went to great lengths to explain himself to the black-eyed wrath of a girl opposite him, in a burst of almost boyish earnestness.

"You see, even if Stephanie did not complicate matters, and if it did not look so silly for a big lummock like me to have got any such effusion out of his system, I still could not reveal myself without making a lot of others look as assinine as myself. The author of 'Play-Girl' has got to be 'Play-Girl' herself. Otherwise the whole thing would be exposed as a gigantic hoax. . . . It isn't done—not any more, if you get what I mean, and know anything about the publishing business. My publishers are not looking for hoaxes. That would ruin the sale of my books, and baby! are we going strong! It would ruin them—and me, which is more to the point!"

Starr asked quietly: "And just where do I figure in this intriguing little story?"

Michael Fairbourne smiled audaciously and leaned back, watching the play of her features.

"You," he said with slow emphasis, "are going to make your debut in New York City as the notorious 'Play-Girl'—the woman who lived my story, and yes, by heaven, who wrote it, too, without a single ghost. You look as if you could have."

Starr drew a long, startled breath. For a second things went dizzy and the little flames in the fireplace were dancing a funny little devil's dance. She had a confused impression of burning gray eyes, a laughing mouth, and the spell of a man's attraction which was stronger than anything she had ever known. His crisp voice cut into her confusion.

"The first moment I heard you on the Avenue this morning crying out that you wanted to play, I knew you were the one for the job. I was more certain of it when I had a glimpse of you late this afternoon and you disappeared before I got a second sight of you."

Blind Phone Operator

Former War Veteran Handles Intricate Hospital Switchboard

Telephone calls from all over the world pass through the intricate switchboard of the London Hospital, the largest voluntary hospital in England, at the rate of about 800 a day. Yet this vital cog in a hospital of 750 beds is controlled by a blind former service man.

Horace Manning is the man. He was totally blinded while serving with the Sixth City of London Regiment, and was trained as a telephone switchboard operator. He has been at the London Hospital for fifteen years. He never makes a mistake, although he handles eight exchange lines and thirty-seven extensions. He has memorized the numbers of all the doctors and hospital officials. After each toll or trunk call he moves over to a typewriter and types full details of the call for reference.

Visited Dying Soldier

New Story Proves Again Kindness Of King Edward

The dedication by King Edward VIII. of Canada's memorial to her dead at Vimy has inspired the publication of anecdotes of His Majesty's last visit there as Prince of Wales. One, hitherto unrecorded, runs as follows:

Some years after the war an ex-soldier was dying, friendless, in a hospital. His only visitor was a well-known padre. As death drew near the man expressed a desire to see the King—then Prince of Wales—whom he had known in France.

The padre understood and dashed to York House, only to be told that the Prince had retired for the night. Evidently the Prince heard and recognized the caller's voice, for a few minutes later, clad in pajamas and dressing gown, he came down stairs and the visitor explained his mission.

"I remember the man," replied the Prince, "and I must see him. I am tired, but as he is so ill we had better go at once. Tomorrow may be too late."

"Tiptoeing along the ward," says the Express Times, which recalls the story, "the Prince went straight to the man's bedside. He took the man's hand and remained thus for some time."

"The man was too far gone to speak, but he opened his eyes and gave a smile of recognition and gratitude. Then he lapsed into a state of coma. . . . That afternoon he died."

Find Undersea Channel

American Coast Guards Have Discovered Old River Bed

Tentative evidence that the Mississippi River once flowed far to the south, through land that since has fallen into the Gulf of Mexico, has been found.

Existence of an undersea channel, such as a river bed, was discovered by soundings from the U.S. Geodetic Survey ship Hydrographer. After taking on supplies at New Orleans, the Hydrographer returned to the Gulf to study the phenomenon.

Recordings of coast guard experts told of a depression, one to two fathoms in depth, running east and west and fifteen miles south of Terrebonne Bay and Timbalier Island. It is not far from the 10-fathom limit off the coast and is expected to extend beyond this line.

The course of the channel seems to be in the same direction as the present Mississippi Valley further to the east, and further study is expected definitely to settle a theory that geologists long have held. Their idea is that the rich Mississippi Valley country originally extended far south and that for hundreds of years the land has been sinking into the Gulf.

Soundings of the Hydrographer are taken at the rate of four a second. The ship works north and south over a limited area. Similar geodetic surveying is being carried on along the entire American coastline.

Therefore shun all that is disquieting, within and without. Nothing in the whole world is worth the loss of your peace. Endeavor to obtain a quiet and peaceful spirit, for God is full of peace and happiness. Avoid all anxious care and vexation which darkens your soul and renders you unfit for the friendship of God. Perfect Driver Rare

Tests Show Most Of Them Have Some Weakness

Dr. Silva, head of the traffic research department of Harvard University, has tested a large number of drivers, and it is his opinion that the auto driver who clicks on all phases of the tests is exceptional, because nearly everyone has some driving weakness of which he is unaware. So it isn't always safe to depend upon your judgment. A generous share of courtesy is a good thing to observe.—Chatham News.

THE ONLY BATTERY BUILT IN LAYERS..

Most "B" BATTERIES look very much alike on the outside. But it isn't what a battery looks like that counts—but what it does. Underneath the jacket of some brands of batteries, are small round cells. The heart of a Layerbilt is a series of tightly packed layers. In the old-fashioned round-cell type, note the waste space in the "Air Pockets" around the cells. But the Layerbilt is all battery—solid layers containing 25% more power-making materials than a round-cell battery of the same size. And because the exclusive construction uses up the maximum of these materials, Layerbilt gives you 40% more power. Layerbilt costs a little more at first—but saves you plenty in the end. Of all "B" batteries on the market, Layerbilt gives you "More Hours per Dollar"—longer life, trouble-free service.

This year—Layerbilt comes to you with an extra improvement—the "plug-in" which eliminates all terminal posts and gives you only one connection for each "B" battery.

PROTEST MINIMUM WHEAT PRICE

(From Calgary Herald, Sept. 1)

Directors of the Alberta Wheat Pool, meeting in Calgary for their regular monthly session passed a resolution protesting against the fixed minimum and also the enactment which prevents the wheat board from accepting deliveries until the price level goes below 90 cents a bushel.

In the words of the resolution the ruling "was considered tantamount to ordering withdrawal of the wheat board from fulfilling the function for

Mr. Olaf P. Larson, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. O. Larson of Coal Springs district, has been engaged as the second teacher in the Irma high school.

Mr. Jas. Craig, who has the contract of fitting up a room in the basement of the high school, will have the room ready for occupancy on Monday, 14th of September. According to reports there will be quite a large class of grade twelve students this year and by having another room accommodation can be given to more outside pupils in the lower high school grades.

The Pool board expressed the opinion that the federal government in its action failed to consider its pre-election promise to market wheat at world levels and return to the growers in Canada a price commensurate with the cost of production.

"What the government's move virtually amounts to," the Pool directors stated, "is an order to the western wheat growers to accept financial rewards for their labor based on world levels. What other class in Canada, outside primary producers, are thus treated?"

"We feel that the policy of the government is reactionary and that the interests of the wheat growers are not receiving the consideration they are entitled to, particularly in view of the considerate treatment given to wheat growers by the governments of virtually every other important wheat growing country in the world.

"The Pools obtained a wheat board after a long struggle and view its forthcoming disintegration with alarm and regret. The world wheat problem is not solved by any means and Canada needs an active and aggressive wheat board."

"What model is your car?" "It's not a model; it's a horrible example."
